— STANDING UP — for our values and priorities in Sacramento

Susan Bonilla is fighting for new opportunities for small businesses and middle-class families

Susan Bonilla understands that the path to the middle class starts with a good education

A mother of four, Susan and her husband John, raised their family in Contra Costa County and faced many of the same challenges as thousands of local middle-class and working families.

As a classroom teacher, County Supervisor, and State Assemblywoman, Susan has used her real life experience to help make meaningful improvements in people's lives.

Protected job training programs that re-train workers and give them the skills for jobs in computers and technology

Created the Women's Initiative Project that helped launch local women-owned small businesses and create new jobs

Helped create new jobs and attract economic investment to high unemployment areas

Helped pass an increase in the state minimum wage

Set new academic standards in public schools to better prepare students for 21st Century jobs

Susan's Priorities for the State Senate

- Improve workplace safety standards and ensure that women receive equal pay for equal work
- Expand college financing opportunities and fight to keep tuition affordable for middle-class families
- Promote the growth of green technology and renewable energy to create new jobs in our region
- Create tax incentives to help small businesses grow and keep jobs in our region
